

Should I contribute to a TFSA, RRSP, or both?

With the availability of Tax-Free Savings Accounts (TFSAs), does it still make sense to contribute to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP)? Determining which plan, or combination of plans, is best depends on your personal situation and your objectives.

The tax assistance provided by a TFSA is, in many ways, the opposite of that provided through RRSPs:

- RRSP contributions are tax-deductible, with both the contributions and the investment earnings taxable upon withdrawal. Withdrawals are included in income and affect eligibility for federal income-tested benefits and tax credits
- TFSA contributions are made from after-tax income, with both the contributions and the investment earnings exempt from tax upon withdrawal. Withdrawals will not affect eligibility for federal income-tested benefits and tax credits

Generally, an RRSP is used for saving for retirement, while a TFSA can be used for both saving for retirement and other shorter-term needs. Because TFSA withdrawals are added back to your available TFSA contribution room in the following calendar year, there is very little downside to using TFSA savings for mid-sized to large purchases.

If you are in a low tax bracket, saving in a TFSA may be more advantageous than saving in an RRSP, since TFSA withdrawals have no impact on federal income-tested benefits and tax credits such as child tax benefits and Old Age Security. If you are in a high tax bracket, you will probably consider using both types of plan. RRSPs may be a better option if your tax rate at the time you contribute is higher than when you withdraw your savings. You'll benefit from a tax deduction when you make your contribution and withdrawals will be taxed at your lower future rate. If the reverse is true, a TFSA can provide better results.

Whether to save in a TFSA, an RRSP or both may depend on your savings needs, your eligibility for income-tested benefits and your current and expected future financial situation and income level. Anyone saving outside an RRSP should consider contributing to a TFSA first.

¹ Any income attributed to deliberate over-contributions will be taxed at 100 per cent.

² The withdrawal of amounts in respect of deliberate over-contributions, prohibited investments, non-qualified investments, asset transfer transactions and income related to those amounts does not create additional TFSA contribution room.

³ You should be fully aware of the risks and benefits associated with investment loans since losses as well as gains may be magnified.

⁴ Includes a spouse or common-law partner as defined by the Income Tax Act (Canada).
